A SERIES BY THE RT. REV. J. F. NOLL, D. D., LL. D.

How Prejudices Turn Peoples' Minds

PREJUDICES make people woefully inconsistent. It would be easy to recount numerous instances, but the most glaring instance is the almost universal demand in the United States for the religious instruction of youth and the concomitant opposition to the only school system which is answering the need.

The International Sunday School Organization reports that 28,000,000 children of American parents are not members of the Sunday School. This means that they are receiving absolutely no religious instruction, because religious parents see to it that their children will attend Sunday Schools. Sociologists, the judges of Juvenile Courts, the heads of Penal Institutions, claim that the lack of religious instruction during youth is basically responsible for the moral lapses and crimes committed by young America. Our most far-seeing statesmen have been insisting for a generation or more that the foremost need of the country is a good citizenship, which can be expected only when the heart and conscience of youth are trained equally and at the same time with the head.

The agitation for religious instruction either during or immediately after school hours is growing in all parts of the country. The religious vacation school has been an actuality in many cities and towns, and the public school buildings are used for the purpose. The boys' and girls' Scout Organizations are intended primarily to imbue children, who have had no other religious training, with sound moral principles. The summer camp idea for children, sponsored by adult organizations, has the same object.

Now all this is an endorsement of the Catholic principle and practice in education. Yet we are criticized rather than commended for the benefit we are conferring on our country.

A few other glaring inconsistencies of Protestantism are these:

(1) We are accused of being against the Bible, while it acknowledges that we preserved it through all the centuries and gave it to the world;

(2) We meet every possible demand which the most rigorous Protestants designate as essential for salvation, yet people are told to beware of us;

(3) The Catholic Church is admittedly the safety of the Protestant churches, yet they join in every movement to injure us.

There would be no orthodoxy in Protestantism were it not for the defenses of the fundamentals of faith by the Mother Church, which still exceeds in membership the combined affiliation of all Protestant churches.

Father Power's Labors Were Probably Similar to His

WHEN the attention of the whole country was called to the interest shown by hundreds of thousands in Father Powers, who was buried sixty years ago in the cemetery at Malden, Massachusetts, people were surprised that no one, not even the clergy of the diocese in which he worked, knew much about him.

But how little would you know or would the priests of your diocese know about saintly characters, their predecessors in the holy ministry, of sixty or seventy years ago?

It is expected that the priest will be a holy man, devoted to his work, and even the saints among them are buried and quickly forgotten.

From a copy of a paper published in the year 1850, or even before the time of Father Powers' ordination, we cull the following, which is only typical of many priests whose days were spent on horseback, and their nights spent in private homes or stables, as they toured the vast territory committed to their spiritual care. Epidemics and plagues were common on those days, and a priest, strong and healthy today, might be dead and buried to-morrow, having contracted the cholera from those on whom he was waiting in their last moments.

"THE LATE REV. JOHN QUINN OF LOUISVILLE.

"The recent death of this zealous and efficient clergyman, while it filled the hearts of his many friends with sorrow, seems to call for something more than a mere passing obituary notice.

"Born in the County Derry, Ireland, he came to this country about seventeen years ago; and after going through the usual course of theological studies in the Seminary of St. Thomas's, near Bardonia, he was ordained priest, and was shortly afterwards stationed in Louisville. He remained here for about thirteen years—until his death on the 7th of the last month.

"He was a most faithful and laborious priest. Always at his post, he never spared himself. Prompt in attending every call, he might be seen, by day and by night, cheerfully visiting the sick and the afflicted, speaking words of comfort, and administering the last rites of Religion. His duties called him chiefly among the poor. In his ministrations he was frequently compelled to remain for some time in the hovels of the afflicted immigrant families, where squalid misery was apparent, and the very atmosphere was laden with the infection of cholera and ship fever. Regardless of himself, he never shrank from the performance of his duty, though well aware of the danger to which he was daily exposed.

"Two years before his death, he was attacked by the cholera in a malignant form, and he barely escaped with his life. On the morning of the day on which he was assailed by the terrible disease, he had assisted at death a poor colored woman, who died of cholera a few hours afterwards; and he ascribed his own attack to his having remained for a considerable time by her bed-side, to prepare her for eternity.

"He died from the effects of a second violent attack of cholera, which he no doubt contracted by his assiduous attention to the sick. Having neglected the premonitory symptoms, the

Nonsense, Religious and Otherwise, Submitted To Sound Reason

ONE of the most glaring nonsensical utterances that has come to our notice is that of a Unitarian clergyman of the east. See if you, reader, do not agree with us. This clergyman says:

"Religion offers to every mind a choice between truth and repose, ideals which stand at either end of religious experience for us to choose between them.

"Between these two ideals we moderns are oscillating, never certain that we dare risk the full implications of either. As a result we have confusion in the minds of men. Which ideal shall we follow? One leads to Rome, with its authority, its creedalism, its revealed religion; the other leads to individualism, to freedom in thinking, often to disillusionment which may follow disillusionment. If we seek repose we will likely accept some creed thought out by another, imposed from above, and religion will become mere acceptance of forms and beliefs. We shall get security, but we shall close the door on truth.

"If we seek truth we shall never be content to cast anchor and rest in the harbor of a revelation negated by every evidence of modern knowledge. We shall pull up the anchor and set out in the quest."

In other words, you will never have repose if you accept objective truth, whether it be taught directly by God or by an institution which has a commission to represent Him.

You might have repose if you accept a creed on the authority of a Church which was mankind's teacher for 1500 years and to which three-fifths of the whole Christian world hearkens today, but the minister maintains that you would not have truth, simply because he does not believe that truth is objective at all. Truth must be of your own finding, as it will appear to you to be the truth, no matter whether nine-tenths of all the sensible men of the world believe differently.

If the minister were to apply his philosophy to the business field, to the educational field, to the historical field, he would readily perceive how fallacious is his contention. Religious truth can be just as definite as scientific truth, as mathematical truth, as historical truth. If God be interested in religion at all—and He must be because the practice of religion becomes the fundamental duty of a creature—He must have made it possible for man to have both truth and repose, and to have repose particularly by yielding adherence to a revelation which even sound reason must demand of God. Even the unenlightened pagans of antiquity declared that if God wants reasonable service He must tell us precisely what it should be, because the Heavenly Father would certainly be interested in having all His creatures know Him alike and serve Him alike.

BISHOP WILSON URGES PRACTICE OF TIPPING HATS WHEN PASSING CHURCHES.

Bishop Luther B. Wilson, (Prof.), in a sermon recently to the members of the Newark conference in session in the Halsey Street M. E. Church, praised Catholic men for the public reverence they display in removing their hats as they pass Catholic churches. He commended the example to Methodists and men of all other denominations. He urged that Methodists follow the practice.

"I see many times Catholic men lift their hats as they pass their places of worship. I would that you and I had such deep regard for religion. It seems to be that we should second this practice and exhibit this reverence, not alone to our own churches, but to all places of worship. And I commend this to you for your consideration."

FAMOUS CATHEDRALS AND CHURCHES

St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York, young in years compared to Cathedrals in Europe, is one of the best known in the world.

Only The Persecuted Church Grows Strong

"The things that one naturally expects to destroy faith are often the things on which the Church thrives. Did any of you ever know of a Church that died of persecution? I know of many dead churches, but they didn't die of persecution. The blood of martyrs is the seed of the Church. Persecution never makes the Church die."—Dr. Finis S. Idelman, Central Christian Church, New York City, New York.

THE minister is right, and it would be well for enemies of the Catholic Church to take notice.

If there be any outstanding fact of history it is that the Catholic Church, in accordance with the prediction of her Founder, has been persistently persecuted by those bad of heart, by the worldly minded, and by those in power who saw material advantages in a campaign of persecution. If there be a collateral outstanding fact of history, it is that the Catholic Church was never destroyed, never injured, but greatly benefited by such persecutions.

It is true that persecution was successful in some countries, and that rival religious organizations, promoted by the State, were established and grew into larger membership, but other countries were the beneficiaries of such persecution, while the faithful at home became much more faithful, when they did not enjoy the privilege of laying down their lives for their faith.

Every anti-Catholic movement in the United States has benefited the Catholic Church. There were many who honestly believed that the Catholic Church was back of the MENACE, an anti-Catholic paper, which once had a very large circulation; that the Catholic Church herself founded the Klu Klux Klan, because the persecution waged by these instrumentalities tended to cement the Catholic people more closely and to start many non-Catholics on the road of investigation into the truth of the charges leveled against the Catholic religion.

The Catholic clergy of the south, where the Catholic religion was made the chief issue in the presidential campaign of 1928, are agreed that the attention focused on the Catholic Church during that campaign was a hundred times more helpful than hurtful to her.

People study history, but they do not learn the lessons of history. If there be any lesson which history teaches it is that the Catholic Church always came forth stronger after every persecution. Jealousy of her on the part of other religious organizations keeps them in a hostile mind, disposes them ever to show sympathy for any drive against the Catholic Church even though it be conducted by Bolsheviki enemies of all religion. The slanders directed against the Catholic Church through many centuries, and still believed by those who have been reared in an anti-Catholic atmosphere, keep many people aloof from the Church. But the Church, like Christ, grows stronger even if she does not grow popular on account of them.

But the old Church moves on, preserves the fundamentals of faith for all Christian organizations and keeps alive faith in the supernatural. The persecutions of the Catholic Church in various countries during the past century have been nothing compared to those waged during the century immediately preceding; but the Catholic Church was not strangled anywhere, her prestige is now rather greater in every country in which persecution was then waged against her.

The reflecting man will recall that Christ predicted that His Church would be treated as He and His Apostles were treated, and that He pronounced her and her followers blessed, because they were privileged to suffer for their Master. Such reflection should lead to another, namely, that the Church, which has survived nineteen hundred years of assault, and which has repeatedly triumphed over every enemy, must be divine.

TORONTO.—Rules for procedure in Ontario's newly-created divorce court have been announced by the Supreme Court. The rules, which are patterned after English procedure with some modifications, provide for public trials without a jury.

Where the filing of a petition is all that is required under the English rule, the Ontario procedure requires the issuance of a writ accompanied by an affidavit of plaintiffs swearing that they believe the allegations to be true.

The law creating a divorce court for Ontario was passed a few weeks ago shortly before the dissolution of Parliament at Ottawa.

NEW YORK.—The number of resident parishioners of St. Patrick's Cathedral has dwindled in the past fifteen years from more than 15,000 to less than 5,000, according to a census recently completed by Msgr. Michael J. Lavelle, rector of the Cathedral. Services in the church, however, are being held before larger congregations than ever before, and the Cathedral is becoming the Mecca for transients.

St. Patrick's is also the center for demonstrations of Faith sponsored by Catholic groups and organizations. Every year more than 4,000 policemen of New York City receive Holy Communion in a body at the Cathedral. Firemen and other employees of the city also hold religious ceremonies there.

LONDON.—Admiral Arne, of the United States Navy, and Colonel Dyer, of the United States Army, were among the crowd of 25,000 persons who attended the "High Mass" held on a London football ground at the opening of the recent Anglo-Catholic Congress.

The service seems to have been inspired by the High Mass celebrated at Soldier Field in the course of the International Congress at Chicago.

A large altar had been erected in the center of the grounds. It was covered by a large white canopy supported on high golden pillars. Hundreds of supplicated clergy were gathered about it, together with a large body of servers. The celebrant, Bishop Roscoe Shelden, of Nassau, wore a mitre of crimson and gold. Gilt and scarlet chairs were occupied by other Bishops in gorgeous vestments.

it was before it was shattered by German guns.

Impressive religious services marked the consecration and ecclesiastical from all parts of Belgium and Northern France were present. High Mass was celebrated by Canon de Laere, former dean of Ypres, who played a heroic part in the war.

DUBLIN.—Special "purified" editions of two English Sunday newspapers will be printed in London for circulation in the Irish Free State.

This was disclosed recently with an announcement that The People and The Empire News, both previously banned under the Censorship of Publications act, would be on sale again here on Sunday, with most of their crime news removed.

ROME.—An Italian newspaper, "La Tribune," recently protested editorially against the visit to Italy of an Italian-American Methodist pilgrimage reported to have sailed from New York enroute to Italy. The protest was headed "an undesirable American pilgrimage," and referred to a statement that the pilgrimage intended to visit spots in Italy "memorable to Protestants."

The editor of "La Tribune" ironically added: "This news teaches us something we did not know—that there are in Italy places memorable to Italian Protestants. In truth we did not know until now that there was Italian Protestantism, and much less that it had memorable spots on our soil."

ROME.—Latest statistics of the Franciscans reveal that 2,408,578 Catholics are found in their care in the fifty-one territories of the mission world in which they labor, with 104,948 more preparing for baptism. Pagans in these territories total 55,114,384.

The personnel engaged in this vast field totals 12,821. Of these 2,748 are priests or brothers, and 2,636 are Sisters. The remainder are catechists, teachers, and lay workers.

MEXICO CITY.—With the recent death of the Rt. Rev. Miguel M. de la Mora, Bishop of San Luis Potosi, Mexico lost one of her best known Bishops and the Catholic Church one of the staunchest defenders of her Faith. Bishop de la Mora was for many years a conspicuous champion of the rights of Catholics. He was accused in 1917 of conspiracy against the government and his arrest stirred members of his Faith all over the world. Pleas for his release were sent to President Carranza by Pope Benedict and by President Wilson.

For three years Bishop de la Mora exiled himself during religious troubles in Mexico, but came out of hiding to take part in the defense of Catholics after the killing of General Obregon. He denied that his coreligionists officially had anything to do with the assassination.

The Psychology of the Gospel Ceremonies in the Mass

By the Rev. John A. O'Brien, Ph.D., Chaplain at the University of Illinois

UPON the completion of the epistle with its gradual and tract, the celebrant proceeds to the center preparatory to reading the gospel. In order that the holy gospel be worthily announced there are required not only a pure heart and pure lips, but the person proclaiming it must have a special mission with the approbation and blessing of God upon him. That is why the celebrant pausing at the center of the altar raises his eyes to the crucifix in external acknowledgment of the great source whence flow so many blessings and spiritual helps, namely, the death of Christ on the Cross.

Then he bows low in outward physical acknowledgment of his spiritual unworthiness to announce the sublime truths of the gospel. While still bent in that posture of humility he articulates the moving prayer that is implicit in his whole bodily demeanor: "Cleanse my heart and my lips, O Almighty God. Who didst cleanse the lips of the Prophet Isaiah with a burning coal; and vouchsafe through Thy gracious mercy, so to purify me, that I may worthily announce Thy holy gospel. Amen."

PROMINENT IN THE OUT-STANDING HEADLINES OF THE DAY'S NEWS

ROME—The French can have their Joan of Arc whose exploits appeal to Italians, but the Fascists are going to have a patron saint of their own.

They have decided to inaugurate a nationwide movement to make St. Catherine of Siena the national patron. A special society has been founded to foster the movement and Mussolini is understood to have given a whole-hearted endorsement to the organization. It is the intention of the Fascists to stress the seal of the saint while not overlooking her personal charm, her efforts to promote peace, and the numerous literary masterpieces that she left for the world to marvel at.

NEW YORK—With racketeers heading here from Chicago, Manhattan faces a new crime wave that worries police but has no terrors for Bernard J. Fagan, formerly chief probation officer of the New York City Children's Court. He has just been made a member of the state parole board by Governor Roosevelt.

Mr. Fagan has some pronounced views on handling criminals. Codding does society and the individual law-breaker more harm than good. Nevertheless, Mr. Fagan believes that an offender who is not a habitual criminal should be given a chance to reform. He has helped thousands of juvenile offenders back on the right road.

PARIS—Tired and broken-down Paris university professors, than indirectly to Cardinal Richelieu of church, state, stage and historic fame, have just received his ancestral chateau and its park of more than a thousand acres, where they may go for a rest and where foreign professors visiting France may also stay. The gift was made by the Duc de Richelieu, a direct descendant of Cardinal Richelieu's nephew.

It was at the castle that the cardinal passed his early childhood. It belonged to his family and later to the cardinal's brother, who died so poor that the estate had to be sold to make good his debts. The cardinal purchased it while he was a bishop, held it during his lifetime, and title to it passed on to a nephew when Cardinal Richelieu died.

It is true that isolation of religion from the world does not make it holy? Is it likewise true that it is necessary to know the substance of a sermon to hear the radio?

Lord once said: "Unless you become as little children, ye cannot enter the Kingdom of Heaven." Children do not have knowledge of the world. The isolation is obvious.

Kindly advise why the Jew's Sabbath Day, Saturday, or the Sabbath Day, was changed to the day of the week in the Middle Ages of Christianity. I am of Protestant faith but opened my mind to religious questions.

In the early ages of Christianity, according to Tradition, within the lifetime of the Apostles, Sunday was observed as the Lord's Day instead of the Sabbath Day of the Old Law.
Sunday was selected to commemorate especially the Resurrection of Our Lord from the dead, and the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the Apostles on Pentecost Sunday.

Observing Sunday as the Lord's Day, the early Christian Church complied with the essential of God's Commandment
at the same time, impressed the Jews that the ceremonies of the Jews had ended with the death of Christ on Calvary.

A man, who professes to be a Catholic, tells his neighbor that he must pay Five cents each time that he misses Mass, otherwise he claims that the priest would not help to get out of Purgatory. What is the answer?

This "practical Catholic" is doing some fun at the expense of his credulous neighbor, or he is a fit subject for a psychological ward. Every Catholic knows that he does not and cannot buy the forgiveness of sins;
must be truly contrite of heart and have a firm purpose of amendment before the confessor absolve him.

During the past school year I attended several lectures by a noted engineer who, in the course of his lectures, touched upon religion. He stated that the contents of the Bible were chaff, the other 16 cent wheat. By chaff he meant untruths or merely insertions by writers of the Bible.
You please comment on

The statements you have made concerning Catholic education.
Whether it be of structural steel work, or in mechanical analysis or what not,
is not major in the study of Scriptures. He may be a wizard in engineering work, but using his very limited knowledge of the Bible or religious subjects. During the past few years many noted leaders in industry have given their sage observations upon religion and alluded subjects, only to make themselves ridiculous.

Despite the comments of your engineer, the Bible has stood the test of the centuries; it will be remembered long after your engineer is forgotten. The Bible is the inspired Word of God and is recognized as such by Christian people. No question, by the infidel, or other of his ilk, can overthrow the Bible.

It is strange and deplorable, indeed, that Catholic parents will permit their children to attend institutions where atheis-tically inclined professors reign.
Were this but an isolated instance, it would be bad enough, but it is most unfortunate that so many teachers, infected with atheistical and communistic ideas, are, under the respectable shadow of the professor's chair, permitted to spew forth their poisoned utterances to the impressionable minds of youth.

Is a sacrifice an absolutely unforgivable sin?
If one receives the Sacraments, is truly sorry and firmly resolved to avoid such a sin in the future, he may receive forgiveness.

Who was the foundress of the Ursulines? Please give a sketch of her life.

Angela Merici, born March 21, 1474, at Desenzano, a little town in Lombardy, founded the Ursu-lines November 25, 1535. She was left an orphan at an early age, but cared for by her uncle.
During the years of her girlhood, she gave evidence of remarkable sanctity. She recognized the need of better instruction for young girls, particularly in religion and it was to care for this great work that she,
with twelve followers, formed the first Ursuline Community.

St. Angela died January 27, 1540. Her body is buried in the Church of St. Afra in Brescia.
Her feast is observed May 31.

An acquaintance of mine, who spends quite a bit of time reading the works of modern-day philosophers, asked me the following question. The Bible states that the bad angels were banished from Heaven. Consequently turmoil must have existed in Heaven at that time. Does it not follow then that there is turmoil existing in Heaven which is described as being a place of everlasting bliss?

The angels, after their creation by God, were on probation as were our first parents. The Apocalypse, chapter 20, verse 27, assures us that nothing defiled can enter Heaven. The Psalms, Book of Isaiah, Book of Job, the Gospel of St. John, and the Apocalypse tell us that none of the evils of this world, such as hunger, thirst, labor, sin, death or strife, can exist in Heaven. St.
Paul says: "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, nor hath it entered into the heart of men what things God has prepared for them that love Him." There can be no sin, no strife, no turmoil where God is.

A SUMMER DAY
The leaves are smiling
In the breeze,
This day in June,
Bright are the skies
Of azure blue
Seen thru the trees.

High are my hopes,
With life at stake—
As birds skim thru the air,
Born to upper firmament
Free from all care
With life's mission content.

After Dinner Story

* Father Tim Casey

(By C. D. McENIRY, C. S. R.)

THE UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEM

Winter had set in at least two weeks earlier than usual, and that was a matter of no little moment in St.
Mary's Parish. The children welcomed it. On the morning of November 15 the lake down in Pelican Park was found frozen solid—a good fortnight before they had even ventured to hope for it. The news was shouted from house to house, and in less time than it takes to tell it, a howling mob was racing for the pond.

But many a worried father and mother had kept fearful watch on the falling mercury the night before and had slept but little. Extra bills for coal! Extra bills for shoes and clothing! Higher prices for food! Loren's torn shoes would have done service until next month if this frigid wave had held off, and Bobbie's overcoat could have waited until after the rent was paid. The family could just barely worry through an ordinary winter when work was plentiful. But now—a mountain of extra bills, and the bread winner out of a job! And then the usual, or perhaps more than usual, allotment of sickness and accidents and unforeseen calamities. It was not merely "hard luck"—it was tragedy.

Father Casey had lived and worked in the very midst of it since last November. January was now drawing to a close, and still no relief in sight. He had been on a sick call down in the poorest section of the parish and was returning sick at heart and weary of limb. Little wonder he murmured a "deus ex machina" when he heard the voice of Ronald Simon calling: "Father Tim, O Father Tim, climb in and let me drive you home."

A big limousine rolled up to the curb, received the priest, and went purring on its way.
"How many times you have promised to come out and see the new house I am building, Father Tim? Now you are my prisoner, and that is the ransom I exact of you."

The rich manufacturer had never once refused assistance to any good work for which Father Casey had appealed to him, therefore the good priest felt in duty bound to satisfy his whim.

"Clearance, don't mind about the factory. Take the next turn for Como Place. Simon told the driver.

"Where you on your way to Plant Number Four?" Father Casey asked.
"I had intended to look in there for a minute. You know, when a plant is shut down it needs as much attention as when it is running, but—"

"Then by all means do so, since you are so near. I am in no hurry. In fact, the worried pastor was far more interested in that idle plant on the outskirts of the parish than in all the fine mansions in the world.

A phantom ship, a haunted house,
a city of the dead, Jerusalem in ruins—
these were some of the uncanny similes which came to Father Casey while he and his friend stood in the deserted factory looking at the long rows of machines silent and motionless.

"It is costing me thousands of dollars for upkeep, without a penny in return, every day this plant lies idle," said Simon; "but we can't crowd the market."

"What are all the workmen doing that used to be employed here?" the priest inquired.

"I'm sure I don't know. Picked up jobs somewhere else, I suppose."

"Are other factories going so strong as to be able to absorb the thousands of men you let out from here?"

"No, Father Tim; other factories are, like my own, firing rather than hiring."

"Then it is quite likely that these men are out of work entirely."

"I shouldn't doubt it. We have a high rate of unemployment this winter."

"How do they live—and support their families?"

"That is a question," he conceded.
"Poor devils, they must be up against it. Lawrence," he ordered, "they stepped into the car, "now drive us out to the new house."

Exteriorly the mansion was finished.
Simple and unpretentious, yet, at the same time, faultless in style, in proportions, in lines, in every minutest detail, it had an air of dignity, strength, repose. Its setting back among the aged oaks and elms of Como Place was perfect; there wanted only the warm breath of spring to drive away the snow and frost and allow the completion of the scheme of lawns, hedges, vines, and shrubs.

Father Casey walked back a little seeking the most favorable viewpoint and stood looking with frank admiration at the beautiful home. Simon was pleased to note how well the priest appreciated the exquisite good taste of the building. He was about to call attention to certain features, when a man in clean working clothes stepped up to him, lifted his hat, and said eagerly:

The front door opened immediately upon a great tiled hall. Father Casey could not restrain an exclamation of delight. Everything seemed so big and hearty, so generous and hospitable; the black rafters, the deep window seats, the broad stair of hewn oak, the massive fireplace. Workmen were busy setting the fixtures of hampered brass and iron.

"Now, Father, let me show you the dining hall, butler's pantry, kitchen, and servants' quarters. I consider our arrangement almost perfect. If this shortage of employment continues, we may hope to get servants who will do an honest day's work and not be so impertinent and independent." Then he called to the overseer: "Hyatt, are the plasterers working out there?"

"Yes, sir." The man approached and said in a lower tone: "I am getting real service on that plastering job, Mr. Simon. Every day the plaster-ers are looking for work, and so I can be mighty particular about the men I hire and about the way they put in their time." He chuckled with satisfaction and passed on to inspect the plumbing.

"What do you think of these tradesmen who cannot get work?" Father Casey asked.

The manufacturer made a wry face:
"For the love of Mike, Father Tim, you are taking all the joy out of this visit by continually harping on what I think about men who are out of work. As a matter of fact, I'd rather not think about them at all. As a subject of thought I find it neither quieting nor consoling. I think toward the Community Chest, the Charity Drive, or any other worthy movement for the relief of the suffering. Oh, yes, I know what you

HUNTINGTON, INDIANA, AUGUST 3, 1930

BISHOP'S HOUSE
1415 West Washington Blvd.
Fort Wayne, Indiana

December 28, 1928.

To Members of My Entire flock:

Since your Bishop not only has an interest in you equal to that of the pastor whom he places directly over you, but shares with the pastor a heavy responsibility in your regard, you will not wonder why he solicits admission to your home once a week in order to address you personally. Every Bishop would undertake the same thing if he had the facilities of a modern printing plant such as your Bishop has.

Now, may your Bishop not ask that you receive his paper with a warm welcome and that you and your children read it with punctual regularity? It may be true that you take other Catholic papers and magazines, but your own Diocesan paper, the cheapest and the best of all, must take precedence over all others.

The Holy Father directs me to tell you that he blesses all who read OUR SUNDAY VISITOR regularly, and your Bishop offers his Mass, not only every Sunday, but every day, for the priests and people who cooperate with him for the general welfare of the souls under his jurisdiction.

With many thanks for the welcome which you extend to me each week after week to address you, I am

John Francis Noll
Bp. of Ft. Wayne

A PASTORAL EDITORIAL

A TOUR OF EUROPE BY AUTOMOBILE

After having spent several days in the Rhineland and Westphalia, I rejoined our touring party at Brussels, having intended to accompany them to Paris and to London.

However, upon the pressing entreaty of two priests who returned to their native land to retire after many years of arduous work in the United States, I agreed to leave the party again and to be their guests in Belgium for a week, and to take the S. S. "Pennland" from Antwerp instead of from Southampton. I did not regret my decision, for these priests entertained me in a manner which will long be remembered.

Together we visited Ostende and Nieuport, the scene of four years of violent warfare between the Belgian and German soldiers. Here 40,000 Belgians lost their lives while making a determined and successful effort to keep the Germans from taking Dunkirk, France, only a few miles distant. We walked fully half a mile in the trenches which the soldiers of Belgium occupied during their warfare. They are preserved as a war memorial by the government.

Belgium is slowly recovering from the depression of the war, though its franc, formerly worth 20c, is now worth less than 8c. Wages are low, and the prices high beyond all proportion to the wages. Clothing and merchandise are nearly as high as in the States, yet 35 francs, or $1.00 a day, is regarded as fairly good remuneration. Good housekeepers are paid about $1.00 a week.

Socialism, taking advantage of the situation, has had considerable success, though in the elections held recently it had a slight setback. The Catholics are well organized against Communism and aggressive infidelity, and their representatives lead in the House of Congress. Many Catholic dailies are published in Belgium and Catholic farmers have a strong national organization. A movement to separate Flanders in the north from Walloon in the south was administered a crushing defeat. Flanders contains sixty-five per cent of Belgium's population, and its people, for the most part, speak the Flemish language. In Walloon the French language predominates. There the Socialists are most numerous.

On the afternoon of June 7, the two priests referred to accompanied me to Antwerp, where I said good-bye to Europe after a very enjoyable visit of nine weeks.

The "Pennland" sailed up the river Scheldt, then into the British Channel, where, after an all-night ride, I met at Southampton the people with whom I had gone to Europe, to return with them to the land we all love.

LESS COSTLY EQUIPMENT BUT FAR MORE PATRONS.

John T. Flynn, who writes an article in the July number of the Forum dealing with "Religion and Business," maintains that the Protestant churches cater to the wealthy, and that clergymen cultivate the interests of the rich men, placing them on their Church Boards, on their Sunday School staffs, etc. Then he calls attention to the investment per church member of all Protestant churches in Manhattan, and contrasts the same with the investment per member of Catholic churches in the same area. He says:

"In Manhattan the plant of all Protestant communions averages nine hundred dollars a member. The Catholic establishment averages sixty-six dollars a member. And the latter includes not merely churches, but hundreds of schools, colleges, hospitals, asylums, convents, and club-houses.

"In the Protestant churches these sums are raised largely through the munificence of a few wealthy patrons. In the Catholic church they are collected in small bits from the masses of its devotees. The effect in each case is somewhat different. The policy of the Protestant churches has set the preachers to running after rich men. That of the Catholic Church has tended to subordinate piety in the priesthood to the harder and more indispensable virtues of practical business capacity." [Of course, we deny his charge against the Catholic priesthood. The complaint among ourselves is that Catholic seminarians overlook the business side of the future priest's administration.]

THE NEW MOVIE CODE

Some weeks ago the daily press carried news about the new Code adopted by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, of which Will Hayes is president. We know very little about the personnel of the Organization which adopted the Code, but, whether they acted under pressure or on their own initiative, we believe that the Code itself is a fine step forward.

We are certain that there are many who will believe that the adoption of this new standard in the production of talking films was made as a gesture to an impatient public. These people will be able to convince themselves whether they are right or wrong in their notion by keeping a close eye on films produced from this time on. If the movies are not true to the letter and spirit of the Code, then people should show their disapproval either by protesting or by withholding their patronage.

Readers Speak to Readers

St. Francis Mission,
St. Francis, S. D., July 9, 1930.

Rev. and dear Bishop:
A parcel post box filled with all kinds of altar linens donated by the members of the Order of St. Veronica, has arrived at our mission in perfect good shape. The enclosed little card shows that we owe it to your kindness. Accept our humble heartfelt thanks. The first holy sacrifice of the Mass I will offer when using them I will apply for the members of the Order of St. Veronica who contributed to the generous donation. We don't know them, but God does, and surely will reward them in His own good way. Not knowing their address, we beg you to tender our thanks to them. Recommending also our mission and school to their prayers.

Sincerely,
P. FLOR. DIGMANN, S. J.

St. Francis Mission,
St. Francis, S. D., July 9, 1930.

Rev. and dear Bishop:
On this occasion I wish also to thank you for the regular sending (gratis, as it seems) of Our Sunday Visitor. Besides our church here at St. Francis, we have over twenty church buildings in the different districts of the reservation. More and more also white Catholics come in of late. Five of our "Patres Excurantes" tend to them as much as possible every week, and each of them takes seven copies along to divide them. No doubt Our Sunday Visitor is a God-send paper and has done already much and will do more in time to come to harmonize and strengthen and establish the Kingdom of Christ in its readers.

Under separate cover I send your Lordship the two last numbers of the Indian Sentinel showing what we try to do for the same purpose.

Recommending our mission and school to your memento at the holy sacrifice.

Gratefully yours,
P. FLOR. DIGMANN, S. J.

Dear Father:

A letter in today's "Readers Column," signed by M. R. Ashmure and having to do with developing greater interest in the Mass, drew my attention.

I am heartily in accord with the views expressed, and if permitted, would like to put forward a suggestion of my own.

If Catholics wish to advertise the Church, in a simple and dignified, yet unostentatious, manner, one which would attract attention without giving undue offense to anyone (I mention this last, inasmuch as a public mention would be employed) why would it not be possible, every Sunday, to publish the Mass of the day in the Sunday papers?

Yours,
CHARLES GUSTAVUS.

Dear Editor:

A good Catholic friend of mine sends me copies of your paper. I read it with interest and have found that the word "Harmonizer" is right. I am a Protestant and a Mason, but the more I read your paper, the better I like it. I am also sending it to some of my Protestant friends as I believe it expresses real Christianity. I want you and my friends to know just where I stand.

Yours,
CHARLES GUSTAVUS.

OUR SUNDAY VISITOR does not beg, but it is willing to accept anything you may care to give for

The Catechists' Training School.

A Little From Many Helps

The Cost of the Catechist Training School—$245,000.00.

Balance Due $46,174.54

Besides carrying the debt on the building, OUR SUNDAY VISITOR maintains the school at a cost of $20,000 a year.

Hundreds of workers are needed for the extensive field, and hundreds of anxious young ladies should answer the call.

Send all donations to OUR SUNDAY VISITOR, Huntington, Ind. 10

all who send $1.00 or more, a one-year subscription to THE MISSIONARY CATECHIST will be mailed.

This monthly magazine tells all about the work of the Missionary Catechists.

Our Catechist Training School, located just outside of Huntington, Indiana, is in full operation. Its purpose is to train young ladies between the ages of 18 and 20 for House Mission work, principally among the Spanish-speaking population in the southwest of our own country. These people, Catholic by baptism, need Catechist and Social Service Workers. Priests among them are too few. Conditions for entrance into the Society of Missionary Catechists are a desire to study, self, zeal for the salvation of souls, good health, and a fairly good education. No dowry is required.

HOW TO SUPPORT THE WORK.

A donation of $500.00 will support a Catechist in training or in the mission field for one year, or $25.00 per month; an offering of any amount will help towards a Catechist. A subscription to THE MISSIONARY Catechist, an interesting monthly magazine, costing only 50c the year, will help.

Evening Prayer

Sacred Heart, remember me;

Locked within Thy holy Wound

This night may I be,

Let me not through any sin

Grieve Thee, my supremest Good.

Pardon grant Thy wayward child

Through Thy precious Blood.

Translations by F. Jos. Mutch.

MORNING PRAYES

In the early morning hour,

Sacred Heart, remember me;

Locked within Thy holy Wound

This day may I be,

Let me not through any sin

For I am Thy child, redeemed

Through Thy precious Blood.
